Pi Project:

Gameboy Zero

<http://benchcrafted.blogspot.com/2018/06/not-woodworking-gameboy-zero.html>

This build is known as a 'Gameboy Zero' because of its use of the Raspberry Pi Zero using Kite's Super AIO (all-in-one) board perfectly designed to fit inside an original Gameboy case to allow button input, display driver, speaker plus headphone amp, and much more.

Discussion topic notes from meeting:

A member brought up Sphero (<https://www.sphero.com/>): is a spherical robo is a white orb wrapped in polycarbonate, capable of rolling around, and controlled by a smartphone or tablet.

Sam's lighting talk about DistroWatch (DistroWatch.com): a site that tracks active distos for the RPi. Lakka is the best for retro gaming: drop any ROMs into the directory and it figures it out

New member brought his PiCade so we found some websites showcasing:

Docker container explanation (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Docker_\(software\))): used to run software packages called "containers" that are isolated from each other and bundle their own application, tools, libraries and configuration files; and communicate with each other through well-defined channels. They are run by a single operating system kernel and are thus more lightweight than virtual machines. Containers are created from "images" that specify their precise contents.
